Former Quilting Student Makes Masks For Fellow Residents

A former Bon Air JCC resident who learned how to sew in Roy Mitchell's quilting class recently took it upon himself to make protective masks for his fellow residents at the Summit House transitional home in Chesterfield, where he is now a resident. He made them with a sewing machine that Summit House therapist Kevin Jefferson bought for him. When Statewide Program Manager Beth Stinnett heard about it, she was inspired. "I spent my weekend collecting sheets and cutting fabric squares for him. I met him Tuesday, and delivered him enough supplies to make about 300 masks. This is such a good news story in the midst of all this craziness." Pictured with Beth in the photo at lower left is Heather Rose, director of specialty programs for Intercept Health which runs the Summit House.
